CONTENT, STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES, OUT-OF-CLASS ASSIGNMENTS
Curriculum Approval Date: 10/09/2018
Lecture Content:
4 HOURS
CONTENT: Students are assessed to determine reading comprehension and speed. They are given an overview of the course including the materials to be used, the course objectives, and in-class and out-of-class procedures and assignments.
HOMEWORK: Students read through the packet of sample readings from different academic content areas and short literary pieces to get an overview of the types of readings that will be encountered and the kinds of skills that will be practiced.
STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES: Determine reading speed and comprehension level. Recognize the role of the reader and the importance of generating background knowledge. Distinguish between academic and literary text and the reading strategies employed with each. Practice skills such as reading critically, asking questions, understanding sequence, pinpointing and extracting main ideas and details, expressing and supporting opinions, defining, annotating, making double entry notes, keeping a vocabulary journal, and using an English dictionary.
8 HOURS
CONTENT: Students work within one academic content area such as ecology, business, biotechnology, geology, cultural studies, archeology, psychology, sociology, or other academic area. Students read several selections and practice reading strategies such as using context clues to understand unfamiliar vocabulary and concepts, and identifying word parts, word families, connectors, antecedents, and parts of speech as a means to improve overall comprehension. They practice critical thinking skills such as identifying patterns of organization, differentiating main ideas from details, and making inferences and using examples to support opinions. They also read a timed selection with the goal of increasing speed and fluency. Finally, as a way of preparing for mainstream academic classes, they read and respond to a textbook selection from another Gavilan College class that addresses the same content.

HOMEWORK: Students read and complete the exercises in their textbook, use their dictionaries to aid their comprehension, participate in class discussions and exercise correction, and begin their vocabulary journal. They also read a sample reading from a mainstream class.

STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES: Become immersed in common academic vocabulary, concepts, and ways of presenting the material in the academic content area used. Apply different reading strategies to the understanding of the readings and make inferences. Familiarize themselves with mainstream college course readings. Increase reading efficiency and speed.

4 HOURS
CONTENT: In the literature component, students read a short story. They learn the elements of the short story, the historical events that influenced its development and life of a specific author. Students analyze the story and the major characters, chart the development of the story including setting, plot, conflict, climax, and resolution; discuss theme and author's tone; apply understanding of historical period and genre to themes in the story.

HOMEWORK: Students read the story, prepare analysis for class discussion, and answer text questions.

STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES: Recognize the elements of the short story. Define the connection between literary genre and history. Read a literary piece and appreciate its purpose, theme(s), and use of language.

8 HOURS
CONTENT: Students work within one of the academic areas listed in weeks 2-3. In addition to the skills listed in weeks 2-3, students distinguish between facts, non-facts, and interpretations; they learn appropriate content terminology; identify the pattern of organization used in the content area readings; and respond in writing to issues presented in the readings.

HOMEWORK: Students read and complete the exercises in their textbook, use their dictionaries to aid their comprehension, participate in class discussions and exercise correction, and continue working on their vocabulary journal. They also read a sample reading from a mainstream class.

STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES: Become immersed in the content-specific vocabulary, concepts, and ways of presenting the material in the academic area used. Apply different reading strategies to the understanding of the readings and make inferences. Recognize patterns of organization. Distinguish between facts, non-facts, and interpretations. Express personal viewpoints in writing on reading issues. Familiarize themselves with mainstream college course readings. Increase reading efficiency and speed.

4 HOURS
CONTENT: In the literature component, students read a second short story. They review the elements of the short story and discuss the historical events that influenced its development and the life of a specific author. Students analyze the story and the major characters, chart the development of the story including setting, plot, conflict, climax, and resolution; discuss theme and author's tone; and apply understanding of historical period and genre to themes in the story.

HOMEWORK: Students read the story, prepare analysis for class discussion, and answer text questions.

STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES: Recognize the elements of the short story. Define the connection between literary genre and history. Read a literary piece and appreciate its purpose, theme(s), and use of language.
CONTENT: Students work within one of the academic areas listed in weeks 2-3. In addition to the skills listed in weeks 2-3 and 5-6, students outline class readings, recognize the logical sequence of steps and/or events, and compare and contrast ideas presented in the readings.

HOMEWORK: Students read and complete the exercises in their textbook, use their dictionaries to aid their comprehension, participate in class discussions and exercise correction, and continue working on their vocabulary journal. They also read a sample reading from a mainstream class.

STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES: Become immersed in the content specific vocabulary, concepts, and ways of presenting the material in the academic area used. Apply different reading strategies to the understanding of the readings and make inferences. Recognize patterns of organization. Distinguish between facts, non-facts, and interpretations. Express personal viewpoints in writing on reading issues. Compare and contrast ideas in the readings. Familiarize themselves with mainstream college course readings. Increase reading efficiency and speed.

4 HOURS

CONTENT: In the literature component, students read a short play. They learn the basic elements of drama and the historical events that influenced its development and life of a specific author. Students analyze the drama and the major characters, chart the development of the story line including setting, plot, conflict, climax, and resolution; discuss theme and author’s tone; and apply understanding of historical period and genre to themes in the drama.

HOMEWORK: Students read the play, prepare analysis for class discussion, and answer text questions.

STUDENT PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES: Recognize the elements of a short play. Define the connection between literary genre and history. Read a literary piece and appreciate its purpose, theme(s), and use of language.

8 HOURS

CONTENT: Students work within one of the academic areas listed in weeks 2-3. In addition to the skills listed in weeks 2-3, 5-6, and 8-9, students recognize synonyms/antonyms and punctuation as context clues, evaluate the readings for author perspective, and move from concrete statements to abstract concepts.

HOMEWORK: Students read and complete the exercises in their textbook, use their dictionaries to aid their comprehension, participate in class discussions and exercise correction, and continue working on their vocabulary journal. They also read a sample reading from a mainstream class.
