

The Russians and Us

Join three experts on aspects of US–Russian relations to understand how academic disciplines help us better frame and more deeply explore this important relationship.

•Craig Mosher grew up in Arkansas and Florida, moving to California for college. His graduate work at San Jose State focused on the development of nuclear weapons programs, and he has taught US history for more than 25 years. He has a special interest in the Cold War, a period which never ceases to interest and amaze him. He is active at his Methodist church in social justice work.

•Dr. Marc Turetzky is a political scientist trained at UCSD (BA), SDSU (MA), Florida State University (MS & PhD), and at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland (Credential in Terrorism Studies; MS). His research specialization is world politics generally and international conflict/terrorism studies specifically. His current research projects include: Presidential foreign policy emphasis during both Bush terms; The US War on Terrorism in West Africa; a 100–day Trump scorecard; and a treatment for a book on Presidential foreign policy emphasis from Truman through Obama.

•Peter Howell--A native of Aromas, CA, Peter Howell studied Computer Science at UC San Diego and San Diego State with an emphasis on web security and programming languages. Since then he has worked in many technological capacities at Gavilan College, including as webmaster and distance education specialist. He also teaches computer forensics and programming at Gavilan, and is a freelance programmer. His interests include robotics, crypto–currency, and our evolving use of technology as a medium of communication.
