

Works Cited Page – MLA Print Resources

Based on MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers, 7th ed.

The list of works cited should appear as the last page of your research paper. Begin the list on a new page and put your last name and the page number at the upper right corner of the page, continuing the page numbers of the text. Begin the list with the heading Works Cited, centered. The entire list should be double-spaced and in alphabetical order by the last name of each author. If the author's name is unknown, alphabetize by the title, ignoring any initial A, An or The. This is an example of what the top of your Works Cited page should look like:

There is a proper way to cite every kind of source. Some of the most common are listed below. Remember, your entire list should be in alphabetical order. Don't group each type of source by category (like books, articles, etc.). Categories shown here are for your clarity.

Parenthetical References

In MLA style, your sources are acknowledged by adding brief parenthetical references within your text. This coincides with your Works Cited page at the end of your paper. Generally, the author's last name and a page number are enough to identify the source. The following are some examples of parenthetical documentation:

General Parenthetical reference

Google's founders "were certainly armed with a healthy disregard for the impossible" (Vise 11).

Parenthetical reference when the author's name appears in the text of your paper

David Vise captures the essence of Google when he states that the founders "were certainly armed with a healthy disregard for the impossible" (11).

Parenthetical References

In MLA style, your sources are acknowledged by adding brief parenthetical references within your text. This coincides with your Works Cited page at the end of your paper. Generally, the author's last name or title (when the author's name is unknown) are enough to identify the source. The following are some examples of parenthetical documentation:

General Parenthetical reference

The Idiom, "ace" often means making an A on a school assignment (Oliver).

Parenthetical reference when the author's name appears in the text of your paper

According to Dennis Oliver, the idiom, 'ace' means to "make an 'A' on a test, homework assignment, project, etc."
