Author: Chinwe Idika
Sponsor: Foothill College
Disposition: System Affairs Committee

WHEREAS, California Community Colleges have continued to express their concerns in regards to the effectiveness of using third-party college placement test programs, and question how equitable these programs are for routinely underserved student populations (i.e. re-entry, disabled).

WHEREAS, the costs for colleges to place students into remediation is estimated at approximately $30-$44 per student per subject (Rodriguez, 2014)--which does not include the long-term expense of remediation and the repercussions of potential misplacement of the student (i.e. staying an extra year, additional textbook fees).

RESOLVED, that the Student Senate for California Community Colleges request that all colleges instead primarily assess readiness for college-level courses by markers such as high school grades, SAT/ACT scores, AP/IB/A-Levels scores, and grades from other institutions of higher learning, and use placement tests as an OPTIONAL assessment of college readiness.

RESOLVED, that the Student Senate for California Community Colleges ask that colleges within the 114-campus system re-assess the causes for unsatisfactory completion rates in remedial courses through dedicated institutional research workgroups within their respective participatory governance structures.

F17-R-04 Advocating the implementation of financial aid for summer and winter class sessions
Author: Bryant Odega,
Sponsor: Region VII
Disposition: Legislative Affairs Committee

WHEREAS, the longer it takes a student to graduate and/or transfer from a community college, the more costly it becomes which makes attending community college less affordable and more time consuming, according to the Campaign for College Opportunity. In their comprehensive study regarding the state of education in California, community college students take a median of 4.1 years to graduate which is more than twice the time for programs expected to last two years for a student to graduate and/or transfer to a four-year university;

WHEREAS, according to the Los Angeles Times report on the aforementioned study, students who could not attend a required class took a different class that they didn’t need so that they can remain eligible for financial aid. Furthermore, these extra classes would lead to more time and money since a student getting a degree in six years from a community college in the Los Angeles area will likely have the opportunity cost of $120,000 in lost potential wages as well as expenses in their career compared to someone finishing in two years;

WHEREAS, the Education Advisory Board reports the decline in community college enrollment is due in part to the sentiment that the education system is considered too costly and time-consuming as cited by the director of Georgetown University’s Center on Education and the Workforce, Anthony Carnevale;

WHEREAS, according to the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, the previous year-round Pell Grant award was impeded by burdensome administrative implementation;

RESOLVED, that the Student Senate for California Community Colleges advocate for financial aid such as the Federal Pell Grant and Cal Grant to be available to students during summer and winter class sessions to ensure that students will be able to afford to take classes during those sessions and to have the opportunity to reduce the time it takes for them to graduate and/or transfer to a four year university;

RESOLVED, that the Student Senate for California Community Colleges urge and encourage the prevention of administrative implementation that may burden the process of restoring year-round Pell Grants; and
